The North Pole, December 24, 2026

Dear Oliver,

Here at the North Pole the snow is piled high and the elves have been wrapping presents since sunrise. This morning I sat by the window with a warm mug of cocoa and opened my big book, the one where I write down all the wonderful things children do during the year. And do you know whose name is shining especially brightly this year? Yours!

The elves told me about everything you did this year: learned to ride his bike, read twelve books this year and helps his little sister with her shoes. That is a wonderful list, and every single thing on it makes me smile. But what warmed my heart the most was this little story I heard: made us breakfast in bed all by himself. Small kindnesses like that make the whole world brighter.

The elves also whispered that you have a very special companion at home: little sister Lily. Please say hello from me! I read your wish (a telescope) very carefully. But you know, the very best part of Christmas is time with the people we love.

On Christmas Eve, listen closely for sleigh bells. Until then, enjoy the cookies, the snow and every happy day.

With love,

Santa Claus

P.S. My reindeer say hello and ask if you could leave them a carrot.
